Tweet for tat?

Salman Khan

JASMINE SINGH

DEPYING those who felt the actor couldn't 'act' on screen, Salman Khan made everyone sit up and take notice of him in his movie Bajrangi Bhaijaan.

As we were still raving about it, the actor stirred a hornet's nest with his tweet on Yakub Memon, as he tweeted, "Hang Tiger. Brother is being hanged for Tiger. Arre Where is Tiger? Get tiger hang him. Parade him not his brother."

What follows is a string of critical tweets, with Salman apologising, and actor Shatrughan Sinha supporting his tweet. Had any non-celebrity done the same, would the reaction be this big?

Think twice

Not long ago, actress Shruti Seth was trolled on tweet for making comments on Prime Minister's selfie with daughter campaign. She was flooded with hostile tweets. Actor Anuj Sachdev finds that the problem lies just with their image, and nothing else. "My friends on FB page go on to criticise the Prime Minister every second day, and trust me, no one cares. Even though I tell them, they will land themselves in trouble one day, their answer is, 'Hum Kaun Sa Shah Rukh Khan hain, hum kuch bhi keh saktey hain.'"

Generally, whatever the celebrities say or do is always given weightage. Recently, actor Hrithik Roshan landed himself in trouble by posting an inaccurate tweet about the recent Manipur attack.

How do we express

Director Rohit Jugraj counts Freedom of Speech as the most precious right. "Just because people read and write everything and anything on us, or about us, doesn't mean we say nothing. In fact, because whatever celebrities say is noticed, they stand a bigger responsibility of saying what is objective and correct."

Actor Aarya Babbar seconds this. He thinks being a celebrity means taking measured steps in life. "We are public figures and the public has 100 per cent right on us. For some people, criticizing or saying something nasty to a celebrity gives them a high. They are nothing but bad human beings."

Under radar

Even though celebrities have always come under the scanner for commenting on social, political or economic issues, director Vivek doesn't find celebrity status coming in the way of expression. "When I was shooting in Bihar for a film, I remember being shown a tweet from a college student on flesh trade. It was this tweet that actually made everyone in Bihar sit up and take a serious note of it. He wasn't a celebrity. It is about what you are saying, tweeting, writing or dicking and how much you know about the issue."

As for Shakti Kapoor, celebrities need to choose their words carefully while expressing. "Otherwise, they will end up embarrassing themselves."
